

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Preface

To serve the children in our Training School, the students in our Normal School, and children and teachers generally, is the mission of this booklet.

The literature referred to is the best that we can suggest. When better shall come to our attention, that will be included, for only "the best is good enough for children." The blank pages in the booklet may serve for additions and notes. All selections presented have been tried either in this school or elsewhere. Nothing is presented wholly on a theoretical basis. Much literature is offered for each grade—much more than can possibly be presented. The intention is to refer to types of suitable material, leaving to the teacher the selection of that which best accords with the characteristics of the pupils and the limitations of the school library. Sometimes the teacher will find the material that will best suit the pupils in a list several grades either above or below the one indicated. This is true, both of the school work and of the home reading.

Considered in a large way, the titles suggested indicate the "content side" of our literature course for the grades. Search on this side will not, however, reveal progressive continuity in thought, nor a center of correlation, nor a correspondence with racial development. Those selections which seem best to accord with the general or specific needs of the pupils, those which express something that is vital to the pupils, those which put in good form the unformed or half-formed ideals of the pupils, those which present advanced ideals to the pupils, ideals of both content and form, always those which are enjoyable to the pupils at the same time appealing to their developing æsthetic appreciation—those are the selections made. Occasional repetitions may be noted even in successive grades. Children do not change so much in a half year or even in a whole year as to make a certain selection fit to be given at only one of those times. Neither do we fear occasionally to repeat a selection with no more than one year intervening. Children often do not get all there is, even for them, in a selection at its first presentation. Besides, the method of approach may be varied when the selection is repeated, so that pupils may often, for example, greet an old friend when they, in a higher grade, read the selection that was read to them earlier, or even still earlier told to them. The methods of approach that are indicated as suitable are intended to be suggestive only. Parts of many selections which are considered suitable, for example, to be read by the children, might well be read to them and still other parts told to them. There is no intention of giving a prescription either as to material or to method.

A select list of references on the pedagogy of literature is given. The importance of the telling of stories and of dramatization is recognized by reference lists on these topics. One play (the first one presented in the Intermediate Grades in the Training School, in which the text was worked out chiefly by the pupils under teacher direction) is published. A few illustrations follow, showing how with only slight suggestions in the way of costume and with no stage accessories, dramatizations have been given.

In story telling and dramatization, as in most other things, little children are leading us to the "everlasting better."

Impersonation of character and dramatic reading are a part of the regular recitation. For the last few years scenes selected from the literature of the grade have furnished material for closing exercises.

PAUL REVERE'S RIDE

NOTE.—The appropriate part of Longfellow's poem is read to the audience before the play, and similarly appropriate parts at suitable times during scene shiftings.

ACT I.—The Midnight Alarm

Scene I.—The House of the Sexton of North Church

Characters:

Paul Revere, the hero of the play.

Robert Newman, the sexton of the church.

[Old-fashioned kitchen of R. Newman's house. Big fire-place at one end of the room. Crane and kettles. Several high-back chairs. Spinning wheel in front of fire-place. Bel-lows hanging at one side of fire-place. Curtain rises. Enter R. N.]

Mrs. N.: (Mr. N. hangs up his hat and coat and, blowing out his lantern, sets it down). Robert, you are later than usual. Have you heard any more news from the British?

Mr. N.: Nothing new. Things are about the same as they have been the last few days. There has been a stir among them, which looks a little suspicious.

Mrs. N.: I do wish those horrid red-coats would see that we Americans will not give up and so give us no more trouble. But I suppose there is no use thinking such good things and we must be prepared to meet the worst. (A loud knock at the door. Mrs. N. turns around with a startled look. Mr. N. opens the door and Paul Revere enters.)

Mr. N.: Why! Good evening, my friend! Any news?

Paul R.: Yes, I have just received this important message from Dr. Warren.

Mr. N. (breathlessly): Read! Read!

Paul R. (reading the note): Friend Revere—Just received word that the British are preparing to move, and we are very sure they are planning to capture our ammunition at Lexington and Concord. So you see Hancock and Adams will be in great danger. I will rely on your ability to help spread the alarm and warn these two men. Make immediate plans to leave the Charlestown shore at the moment we know more concerning the exact movements of the British. I have also informed Dawes to leave by the Boston Neck and help. Act according to your best judgment. Yours in haste, Joseph Warren.

(Burns the note.)

Mr. N.: There is no time to waste; immediate action must be taken.

Paul R.: I must go at once, for my men are waiting on the shore now to row me across to Charlestown where I can obtain a good swift horse.

Mr. N.: We must agree upon some signal so that you may know what route the British are going to take.

Paul R. (pondering): I have it! Hang one lantern in the belfry of the North Church if they go by land, and two if they go by sea. I will be on the opposite shore ready to spread the alarm. Goodwife, have the lanterns cleaned, and put fresh tallows in them. Good night! (Starts towards the door.)

Mr. and Mrs. N.: Good night!

Paul R.: May God speed you! (Exit Paul R. Curtain falls.)

Lieut. Col. S. (speaking to the officers at one side): I have just received a message from Gen. Gage ordering us to march to Lexington and Concord to-night. Every one must move quietly, no drums must be beaten. Commands must be given in almost a whisper.

Officers (giving commands in low tones to the soldiers): Forward! March! Left, right, left, right, etc.

(Exit soldiers and officers.)

[Clatter of horse's hoofs heard in the distance.]

Paul R.: Whoa! (Knocking loudly at the door and shouting.)

The Regulars are coming! Wake up! Rouse all the people! (Hannah B., with night-cap on her head, comes to the window.)

Hannah B. (calling loudly): Mercy on us! What's the matter?

Paul R. (replying hurriedly): Matter enough you'll find by daylight! The British are coming!

Capt. B. (coming to the window): What's that! The Regulars are coming? Come in! I must have further particulars.

Paul R.: Very well, I will rest my horse for a few minutes.

(Curtain falls.)

Scene 2.—Interior of Captain Belknap's House

[Enter Capt. B., followed by Paul Revere.]

Paul R.: We must hasten. I have but a few minutes to spare.

Capt. B.: The whole country around must be notified. Here comes Timothy. Take old Dobbin and ride towards Lynn; notify everybody along the road and have them notify others. Zeke, you take Jerry and go towards Arlington.

Paul R.: Muster as many men as possible and take your stand here. Look out for the red-coats. There may be spies on the road. (Enter other members of the family one by one.) I just escaped capture at Charlestown Neck. (Exit Paul Revere.)

Mrs. B.: Girls, we must get busy and prepare plenty of food—gingerbread, doughnuts and hot coffee. Dan, you bring in a ham from the smoke-house.

Capt. B. (to the other two boys): Boys, we must get the powder and flints ready. (Enter neighbors and a general conversation follows. Curtain falls.)

Sergeant M.: Halt! Who goes there?

Paul R.: A messenger.

Sergeant M.: Be quiet! Make no noise! You'll wake up all the people in the house!

Paul R.: Noise! You'll have enough noise before morning. The red-coats are coming!

Rev. Clarke (appearing): What's the trouble out here? (Seeing a stranger.) I can admit no strangers at this hour of the night.

J. Hancock (recognizing Paul Revere's voice, appears): Come in Revere, we know you. Have you brought news from Dr. Warren?

Paul R.: Yes, Mr. Hancock, I was to warn you and Mr. Adams that the British, eight hundred strong, left Boston two hours before midnight with orders to capture and destroy the stores at Concord and were also to take you and Mr. Adams prisoners.

S. Adams (coming to the door): Ah! They would give us quick passage to England, no doubt. But thanks to your timely warning, Revere, they will find that the birds have flown.

J. Hancock: I feel it my duty, Mr. Adams, to stay here and put myself at the head of the minute-men—

S. Adams (interrupting): Your duty, as well as mine, is to work with the Provincial Committee of Safety. At present we are needed there. (Clatter of hoofs again heard. All listen as William Dawes approaches.)

All: Who is it? What is the news? Who are you?

Dawes: Dawes, with a message from Dr. Warren.

Paul R.: Ah! That is you, Dawes! I arrived but a short time since. You made quick time.

Dawes: I had several narrow escapes, but by strategy and the help of my faithful and wise old Dolly, we made our way through the British lines.

Paul R.: We must hasten if we would reach Concord before daylight.

Dr. Prescott: I will join you with your permission. I was delayed later than usual and have my horse here at the hitching post. Three chances are better than one.

Rev. Clarke: Yes, to be sure, spies are lurking about, no doubt. Some suspicious looking strangers were seen on the Concord road last week. (Exit Dawes, Prescott, and Paul Revere.)

Mrs. Clarke (in the meantime Mrs. C. has been busy preparing coffee and lunch, and comes to the door with coffee): Come, gentlemen, you all need something refreshing before going.

You must drink a cup of coffee, whether you want anything to eat or not. (Exit Mrs. C.. She soon returns with a basket.) You must also take this basket of lunch that I have prepared. (Curtain falls.)

Capt. P. (orders the drum beat and gives command to form in line): The enemy is approaching! Remember the wishes of the Provincial Congress! "Stand your ground. Don't fire unless fired upon, but if they mean to have war, let it begin here." (All face the enemy as they approach.) We are outnumbered ten to one! We must retire!

Major P. (commands troops to halt and form line, facing the Americans): Disperse, you rebels! Lay down your arms! (Waves pistol in air.) You villians! Why don't you lay down your arms and disperse? (Soldiers fire a few scattering shots on each side, followed by a general discharge from the English. Fire is returned and war is begun. English cheer and retire towards Concord.)

Col. Barrett, Dr. Prescott, Messenger.

[Groups of men, under command of Col. Barrett, concealing stores, musket balls, barrels of flour, beef, molasses, and candles. Talking as they work.]

Col. B.: 'Twas fortunate, Dr. Prescott, that you made your escape and reached us as early as you did. Although we had received our first warning Sunday night, we certainly were not prepared for this sudden move. Were Revere and Dawes both captured?

Dr. Prescott: I think so. We were surrounded, but I managed to jump my horse over a stone wall and escaped——

Messenger: The red-coats are approaching! They are within two miles of the village.

Col. Barrett: We have no more time to conceal our stores. The rest we must defend. (Curtain falls.)

Scene 2.—Concord Bridge, Americans Defending

Characters:

Col. Barrett, Capt. Davis, Americans, British.

[Fifes and drums are heard as the Acton company approaches under command of Capt. Davis. Fifes play "White Cockade."]

Col. B. (looking toward Concord Town): They are setting fire to the stores we could not hide. We must force the bridge.

Capt. D.: Col. Barrett, we Acton minute-men crave your permission to clear the bridge. There is not a man in my company that is afraid.

Col. B.: Pass to the bridge without firing, but if fired upon, return the fire. It is the King's highway, and we have a right to march on it if we wish to go to Boston. Forward, march! (Tune of "White Cockade." On the bridge the English fire two distinct volleys. Men fall. Davis and others are either killed or wounded. Battle is on. English begin the retreat. Americans, approaching from every direction, drive the British toward Lexington. Curtain falls.)

Scene 3.—Pantomime

ACT V.—(Same as Act II.)

Scene 1.—Capt. Belknap's House (same scene as in Act II.)

Characters:

Same as in Act II.

[Mother and daughters anxiously awaiting the return of the father and sons.]

Cynthia: Don't worry so, mother. We feel sure that father and the boys are safe and will soon return.

Mother (looking from the window): Here comes Reuben now. (Reuben enters.) My son, have you seen anything of your father and the boys?

Reuben: Benjamin is coming down the road and the others will soon be here, I guess. What a chase we gave those lobster-backs!

Nancy: Goodwife Gerry says she heard our men drove them back along the Boston road on the double-quick. (Enter Capt. Belknap and Benjamin.)

Benjamin: Hurrah! Well, mother, girls, we won the victory after all. Those red-coats were in great confusion. Weren't used to our way of fighting.

Capt. B.: What a retreat that was! When they got back to Lexington their tongues were hanging out of their mouths like those of dogs after a chase. (Enter Ezekiel with head bound up.)

Mrs. Belknap: What is it, Ezekiel! Are you hurt?

Ezekiel: Only a scratch, mother. One of those red-coats thought he got his man. He made a pretty good shot, though.

Sally: Where are the red-coats now, father?

Capt. B.: Well, those who were not killed or wounded are probably now on Charlestown Neck.

Benjamin: 'Twas just at sunset, they entered Charlestown under the welcome shelter of the guns of Somerset.

Ezekiel: Yes, and not a moment too soon, for Col. Pickering with the Essex militia of seven hundred were within a quarter of a mile of them.

Benjamin: Had their road been blocked by these Essex men, they must have surrendered. (Enter Mrs. Brooks, a neighbor.)

Mrs. Brooks: Oh, Capt. Belknap, I hear drums beating down the Cambridge road. What does it mean?

Capt. B.: More minute-men coming from distant towns. There are twenty thousand of them in Massachusetts alone. By to-morrow there'll be militia here from Rhode Island, Connecticut, and New Hampshire.

Reuben: War has really begun. But, father, I fear we shall come short of powder and bullets.

Capt. B. and Boys: Yes, I fear that too.

Mrs. Brooks: We must melt up all our pewter platters, bowls and plates and run them into bullets.

Mrs. Belknap: Take all the pewter dishes you want, girls, but the thought of the terrible days to come is almost too much for me.

Capt. B.: Yes, there are hard days, perhaps years of struggle before us, but do not grieve, Deborah, for our cause is a just one and we must succeed.

Mrs. Belknap: Yes, we may succeed. But, oh, will the day ever come when troubles like these will be settled without this cruel fighting and awful bloodshed!
